His speech was written and he frequently referred to his typescript. The correspondent learned in official quarters last night that there is a strong belief that Dail Firzeann will agree to the Premier's suggestion for a settlement and that concessions in the Irish bill the Government is ready to make have been outlined to prominent Irishmen.

"I desire to make a statement to position before we publish certain documents on Ireland," said the Premier, reading from manuscript.
'During the last few weeks the Government has been in touch with intermediaries who have been anxious to bring about a better understanding.

"There have been no negotiations. but certain people who offered their services have seen both sides, thus enabling the Government to arrive at certain conclusions about the position in Ireland. As a result of this consideration they have, after sible hopes. a very careful survey of the situation, decided upon the course I now propose to unfold to the House.

"They are convinced the majority of people in Ireland of all sections are anxious for peace under a fair settlement. The Government on their side are no less anxious peace and fair settlement. In this respect, as I think they represent the views of the people, Spirit of Proposals.

"The Government also is convinced that the section of the party which controls the organization of violence, murder and outrage in Ireland is not yet ready for peace; that is to say, for a peace which will accept the only basis on which peace can be concluded, while preserving the unbroken unity of the United King-At the time of his arrest in Sep-dom. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets-the sub-

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

MINISTER, QUITS AS - STREET DECISION ON BONDED LIQUOR

Judge Faris So Decides in Mechanic Answering Call Suit to Remove Whisky From Warehouse to Home for Beverage Use.

The test case brought by Charles Cornell, a former saloonkeeper, to compel the Internal Revenue Collector to permit him to remove a barrel of whisky from a bonded warehouse to his home for beverage purposes was decided against him a second time today by Judge Faris in the United States District Court,

The first decision against Corneli was in September, when he based his suit on a contention that the transportation clause of the Volstead act was invalid. His second suit was filed after the United States Supreme Court, Nov. 8 last, in the case of Street vs. The Lincoln Safe Deposit Co., ruled that an owner of whisky legally acquired had a right to remove it from a private safe deposit box to his home for heverage uses.

incomparable art. Four Big Vocal Numbers. His numbers, disdaining the routine of program making, were admirably chosen for merit, novelty and contrast. First, there was the florid lyric. "Where'er You Walk." from Handel's secular oratorio, "Semele." Then there was the "Chanson de la Touraine." from Massenet's musical farce, "Panurge," a simple but poignant lay in ballad style. Next came the drinking song. "Quand le flamme de l'amour," from Bizet's "La Jolie Fille de Perth," with its contrasting moods of joviality and despair; and, finally, as an encore, a Spanish ditty, "Canto del Presidalo," by Alvarez, which was flamingly and fingingly achieved. The first-time number was I'The Pleasure-Dome of Kubla Khan," after Coleridge's sublime poem, by Charles Tomlinson Griffes, who died

A few months ago at the age of 36. How severe a loss American music suffered may be judged from this brief masterpiece of fancy, instrunentation and musical description It opens strangely with a prolonged tremolo deep in the strings, against which haggard chords are struck on the pianoforte; one can see the wan tumbling of charmed waves as the sacred river Alph runs "through caverns measureless to man down to Palace of Tones Arises.

To the building up of a climax in the orchestra, with tower and battlement of sound ascending, there rises like an exhalation the stately and mysterious pleasure-dome Kubla Khan; in lyric idyls chanted by the oboe in its most eerle voice, or by the flute with tingling chords of the harp, there emerge the poet's "gardens bright with sinuous rills," and "sunny spots of greenery." Then, drawing on his own fancy, not that of the bard, the composer invents a savage episode of dancing and revelry, wild, uncouth and cruel. It dies out suddenly; the murmur of the enchanted river is heard again; and finally the celesta, with its bright and crystal chime, suggests sunny pleasure-dome

GEORGES PRAISES FRANK

Frenchman Declares Coolness, Punch and Courage Enabled American to Win.

LONDON, Dec. 11.-Frank Moran of Pittsburg knocked out Joe Beckett, the English heavyweight champion, in the second round of their bout in Albert Hall here, last night. The end came suddenly, when, in the midst of a furious rally, Moran crashed a ripping uppercut to the chin, felling his adversary for the

The bout was even in the first Moran circled warily about and suddenly lashed out with a left to the head. Before the blow landed, however. Beckett hammered a heavy right to the jaw. Moran shook his head, and, flailing out with a right swing, ran into a clinch.

The American held on tightly, and was warned by the referee. The round ended shortly afterward.

Moran advanced with outstretched left and poised right in the second round, but the Englishman was wary. Beckett peppered Moran with light lefts and the American suddenly charged, trying short-arm jolts as he closed in. He failed to land effect-ively, however, and Beckett shot a powerful right smash to the jaw Moran then cut loose with a fusillade of blows, and the Englishman met the attack in kind. They were stand-ing toe to toe trading punches when suddenly the American put all his strength into a lifting uppercut that landed flush on his opponent's chin.
...Beckett slumped to the floor and was counted out.

FURTHER DROP IN RAILROAD SHARES ON STOCK MARKET

Industrials Also Are Weak—
Sterling Rate Firm
at $3.45.

By Lessed Wire From the New York
Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The Evening
Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:
"Weakness continued on the Stock Exchange this morning. Among the rails, declines of 1 and 2 points were the rule, and additional new lows for the year were made, as in the Exchange this morning. Among the rails, declines of 1 and 2 points were the rule, and additional new lows for the year were made, as in the case of St. Paul which sold down to 28% and New Haven which dropped to 17. The industrials were weak, too, but in general, not to such an extent as in the case of rails. Ameri-can Woolen which broke 5 points Just before closing yesterday, lost another 3 points in selling at 62% American Sugar also broke 3 points. "The volume of trading was not as large as yesterday, but the market as fairly broad.

"Sterling continued firm at $3.45, hile cotton was slightly weakered wheat slightly stronger.
"An increase of $43,668,000 in net demand deposits is the most striking teature of the Clearing House Bank statement. Loans were decreased again, but only by $619,000. Borrowings at the Reserve Bank were reduced $5,634,000 and the excess was cut in half, or to $11,-

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Heavy selling continued this morning in the railway list especially in the low priced members of the group. This was helped on considerably by the announcement overnight that the announcement overnight that the dividend payment on the preferred shares. Such action was a reminder of the present very unfavorable position of the New England roads and of their complete dependence upon action by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the matter of through rates to the West which is declared to be the only way in which receiver and as it has realized that there was no occasion to be upset time the Boston and Maine management was a further reason for withhelding dividends and this some of the present situation of some of the weaker roads which is decidedly unpleasant.

SHORTS COVER IN SMALL MARKET; WHEAT IS STRONG

CHICAGO Dec. 11.—The wheat market showed considerable strength today because of a general commission house buying and short covering in all grains. Offerings were light. Strong commission houses with Eastern connections were said to be good buyers to 2 %c higher, with December 1 fewer to 5 %c higher, with December 2 fewer to 5 %c higher, with a report that Saskatchewan had reduced the estimated wheat crop of that province 20.000,000 bushels coupled with a report that Saskatchewan had reduced the estimated wheat crop of that province 20.000,000 bushels were responsible for renewed strength later in the wheat market. At the finish prices showed a new gain of one cent to 4% cents with Dec. 31.65. and March 51.50 to 51.59%.

There was good bying of corn by strong commission houses with Eastern connections, and opening trades which ranged from %c lower to %c higher, with May 71 %c to 71.%c. The strength in corn was not maintained however, despite a fair trade to seaboard and at the finish prices were unchanged to under yesterday's close with May 71% to 71.%c. The strength in corn was not maintained for work of the finish prices were unchanged to the other work of the finish prices were unchanged to ings and to attendance which ranged from unitary extended to the commission houses with May 71% to 71 after the close of business yesterday. Other mining shares were little changed from the previous close.

STEADIES PRICES IN COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The cotton market was comparatively quiet. Considerable progress has considerable and the week, but there was some further Wall street liquidation at the opening and first prices were 1 to 20 points lower. Offerings were pretty well absorbed by trade buying of January and March however, while there was scattered covering, which held the market fairly steady, with January selling around 15.70c and March 15.82c shortly after the call. A Southern organization estimated the crop at 12,227,000 bales, excluding linters. Cotton futures closed firm; Dec. 15.65c; January, 15.82c; May, 16.01c; July, 18.10c.

WITHERS' ATTITUDE Says He Can't Give Best Service

With Present Conditions in Board of Education.

7-18 Following his announcement 12 Nov. 30 that he will not be an applicant for reappointment when his term expires, Feb. 21, Dr. John W. Superintendent of Instruc-Withers, Superintendent of Instruc-tion, today issued the following statement of his reasons for declining to be a candidate:

"My reasons for declining to be a candidate for reappointment as Superintendent of Instruction and for announcing the fact at this time

"It is utterly impossible under conditions that now exist in the Board of Education to render to the extent of my ability the kind and quality of service which the charter requires of the superintendent and which the people have a right to expect. There are problems of the greatest moment before the schools that call for the unhampered effort of the superintendent and the intelligent support of the entire Board of Education if they are to be happily solved and if the schools are to which they have won and now occupy among the city school systems of America. The call for unified effort, for unselfish service on the part of all who are engaged in this work is always present. That call is today and will be for the next four years quite as great as it was at any time during the period of the war.
Responsibilities of Position.
"Under the provisions of the Charter the position of the Superintendwhich they have won and now oc-

The wheat market ruled firm on the Merchants' Exchange today, but corn after firm start eased and closed slightly lower. Oats were mixed. December oats being up and May lower.

Wheat futures had rather wide upward range, several cents being added to last night's close in the forepart of the session. The buying was mainly covering by shorts after the decline of the past days. Offerings were limited until a substantial advance had been recorded and then offerings caused reaction from the high.

Further export sales of heavy volume were reported made yesterday. Talk of probable increased movement of corn from the farm has entered as a factor in this market.

NOMAN CLERK VICTIM OF "SPECIAL DELIVERY" SWINDLE

Miss Mary Walsh Second Girl to Be Defrauded by Revival of Old Trick. A man described as neatly dressed, about 32 years old, and a suave talker swindled Miss Mary Walsh, a clerk in a dry goods store at 4052 Olive street out of $20 yesterday. using 'the "special delivery letter" hoax which, police say, has been re-vived recently after several years bsence from crime annals.

Thursday a man answering the same description swindled Miss Gertrude Kreplin, 18 years old, who was in charge of her father's bakery at in charge of her lattice by the same game.

At the dry goods store yesterday he bought a collar button and paid for it and asked for a $20-bill to put in special delivery letter ad-dressed to a Chicago doctor. Miss Walsh gave him two $5 bills and a $10 bill, which he apparently put in he envelope, giving her a roll of $1 bills. As he started out she discovered there was only $19 in the roll called his attention to the

He apologized, took back the roll and saying he would see his wife and get the balance departed leaving the special delivery letter on the counter. When he did not return the letter was opened and found to contain tissue paper.

Police say the scheme is worked by two methods, one by using du-plicate letters and the other by palming the money.

The ever-recurrent tide moves in to shore, The same gold moon of yore

But not so far as we shall travel hence, Soon shall commence Our separate ways. And all our days Be filled with restless, hurrying hours, that not Remembrance know. We'll say we have forgot Bend close enough for us to pluck a star.

Until it comes a fact. We shall have packed All this in memory-dust, and prudence stern Shall sit enthroned before the sealed urn. -So now come closer to my side.

Look at the wide. Great shimmerous, watery plain, And once again "Deeper than all this sea Our love is, love,

The Shipping Board says the difference of $513,336,139 between what it spent and what it took in is not to be construed at this time as a loss, since it has settlements to make with the army and navy. Nevertheless, what we all easily suspect is that the board did not make any money for us. As a matter of fact there no money in war for a Government except it is conducted upon the Caesarian principle of taking the other fellow's country when you conquer him. Private profiteers can make money on any kind of war, but the Government cannot. We lost money in our great European venture Mr. Wilson thought of it as a moral or spiritual conquent, but as soon as the mass of us discovered that we had sustained a material los there was great wrath in the country. You have what most people thought in the election turns. Is seems that we cannot fight for principle alone. The country is not up to it. We must bring home the bacon. Read the report of the Shipping Board. You can't detect th faintest smell of bacon about it. The board says the smokehouse is not yet closed, but it can't fool us. There may be a stray ham or two still in there, but the bacon is gone. We need a business administration.

The trustees of the Millikin farm at Crescent ask permission to sell it, despite the testator's command that it be operated for the benefit of the heirs. The trustees say they did operate it this year, and they lost about $34,000. We can believe it. Imagine three trustees operating a farm! Only one man can run a farm and make it pay, and in most cases one is too many. There caunot be three opinions about anything on a farmer always shrinks from having one. He has found that it costs money. One trustee living on the place and having to make it furnish him bread and butter might make a farm pay. That is the only way in which it can be done. There are three kinds of farmers: (1) Farmers, that is men who live on farms and make a living on them; (2) agriculturists, that is men who have farms and maintain them with money they make in town; (3) agronomists, that is men who live in town and spend all the money they make on a farm without getting ahead any-Three trustees would be agronomists. News item in Post-Dispatch of 11-21-20, referring to the despoliation of Forest Park: A Post-Dispatch reporter investigated and found that the virgin soil had been trimmed from the clay subsurface in huge spots of a 20-acre area, and the wild undergrowth which formerly had surrounded giant oak and hickory trees had been removed, leaving the ground bald.

There are a great many people who enjoy an outing in the forests, a trip for hunting or fishing, a camping experience, or some other form of recreation. There are many more who ought to have the privilege. City conditions are such that a visit to the forest means more to an in-dividual than can be measured in dollars and. cents. Yet few people entirely understand the how and why of forest influences.

A forest produces certain natural conditions which are beneficial to man. When the leaves are developed, especially, rain is not permitted to reach the earth without its force being broken. Some of it evaporated immediately from the leaves and stems. Part of it forms streams which run down the trunks of trees, and the balance reaches the ground directly in drops or spray. The war-garden experience of the last several years has taught many a one the beating and washing effect of rain upon unprotected soil.

On the ground beneath an ordinary forest there is found a body of leaves and branches in various stages of decay. What rain reaches the vegetable matter is prevented both from packsteadily absorbed by it and collected into pools of varying sizes. This material keeps the soil under it loose and the water held by the leaves gradually soaks into the soil and finds its way to underground water courses. These in turn feed the springs and streams. The forest floor and soil, therefore, are nature's filter bed water comes out free from impurities which are

The snows of winter are held by the woods and while most ground outside of the forest is frozen, little of it within the forest and under also seeps into the ground instead of running over frozen ground into the streams. Surface water reaching streams carries with it all the impurities it picks up on its way.

The forest is for rest, and yet in our hurried pace for gain we have overlooked the recreational needs of ourselves and removed the things nature provided to make men and wom-en strong mentally and physically. We are comback to our senses, however, and are making breathing spaces within the city limits. Each should have its own city forest, of which is the recreational use. Because of the recreational value of forests, every citizen should help to protect them.—Robert S. Conklin, Commissioner of Forestry of Pennsylvania.

THE LEFTCH PLAN.

From the Chicago Draugas (Lithuanian.)

N Danville, Va., the relation between capital and labor is very interesting. Here we have the Dan River Cotton Works, employing about 7000 wockets. Several months ago the workers, with the consent of the employers, introduced a new sytem, the Leitch industrial theory. The factory is ruled by the senate and a lower house. The representatives are elected by the workers. Representatives to the cabinet, which is the executive committee, are elected by and from these two houses. The executive committee also includes the highest official of the company. Not so very long ago the affairs of the company were in a critical state. The entire "congress" was called into session. The official of the company addressed the workers and explained the state of affairs. A committee was elected to investigate -the results made known-and congress voted for a lower wage, which was later passed by the executive committee. This plan, introduced by the workers themselves, saved them not only from memployment, but prevented the closing of the Only radicals could spoil such good The above is the result of the better understanding and progress of labor.

WHITE RACE IN THE TROPICS.

A T the last Australasian Medical Congress, held at Brisbane, a subcommittee reported on the effect of a tropical climate upon the white race. Its conclusion was that, with proper precautions, white settlers may thrive in hot climates better than is generally believed; but that, under present conditions, their health in tropical Australia deteriorates. Neurasthenia causes 25 per cent of the invalidity; but climate is not the sole reason for this. Nervous diseases are partly due to changed conditions of living. Their inreased fisquency where white and colored races live in contact, whether in the torrid or the temperate zone, is ascribed to the fact that under such conditions, the whites especially white women—do not have the usual amount of physical labor or exercise.

NEW GERMANY.

MME. GERMAINE PICARD in La Revus Mondiale (Paris).

M Y husband said, when we left, that it was better not to speak French in Frankfurt. There had recently been unpleasant incidents. It was unnecessary to cause new provocations so he wore a civilian suit. Here, one's first impression is less reassuring. Field gray soldiers, carrying arms and wearing their heavy trench helmets, are on guard at the station. But my nervousness was soon over. At the exit was a triumphal arch of green boughs, carrying the white and red colors of Frankfurt before its annexation to Prussia. A single inscription was visible in the midst of the greenery: "Welcome Home." They were expecting the return of the war prisoners from France. No allusion to the war appeared. No-where did I see the sinister Prussian flag, whose black and white stripes suggest a mourning let-ter. Neither did I see the imperial flag. Nevertheless, we are in Prussia. How easy it would have been for the armistice to have separated these people from the kingdom of the Hohenzollerns. The shops are crowded. The book stores give a prominent place to the letters of Wilhelm II to the Czar, and to Kautsky's book on "The Causes of the War." I also notice the memoirs of several German Generals, those of Ludendorf holding the place of prominence. Beautiful goods are displayed in the shop windows. The effects of the war are scarcely noticeable here until you investigate and find the leather is paper, the massive furniture veneered, and the coffee a compound in which the chief constituent is ordinary beans. In an elegant refreshment room, quite like those you would find in Paris or Nice, we enjoyed an ice and cakes with cream, which I must admit were excellent, although it is impossible to buy milk or butter or fresh eggs in the market. THIS is the sixth of a series of remarkable detective stories now running on Saturings in the Post-Dispatch. The series describes some of the many events in the professional career of a private "inquiry agent."

This description of Mr. T. Carrington, privat detective (or "inquiry agent," as he preferred to call himself), appeared in a tale entitled "Simon," and is culled from that work with its author's permission: "He was a young man, apparently a little over 30, above middle height, with a round, ingenuous, very agreeable face, smooth, fair hair, a little, neatly Duke of Munster, so you will see that the mattrimmed mustache, and a monocle that lent just the necessary touch of distinction to what might otherwise have been a too good humored physiognomy." The stories which are appearing every Saturday in the Post-Dispatch were for the most part told by Mr. Carrington himself over a smoking-room fire.

E had got Carrington well on the talk one night on top of an exceedingly good dinner, when one of us suddenly asked

"By the way, Carrington, did you ever come across Sherlock Holmes?" He shook his head I've often wanted to, but unfortunately he was before my time. I've met Dr. Watson though."

"What, the Dr. Watson, Holmes' pal?" Carrington nodded.

"The very fellow. He came to consult me once. It was his case, not mine, so I don't know whether I really ought to tell you the yarn." He paused, but there was a twinkle in his eye that encouraged a little pressure. We pressed and he succumbed. "When he sent in his card," he began, "I didn't in the least grasp who he was, but the moment

I saw him I began to have a dim suspicion that there couldn't be two Dr. Watsons with such a preternaturally wooden looking head, and his very first words settled the question. "You have no doubt heard of my distinguished friend, Mr. Sherlock Holmes," said he. "And possibly you may also be aware that in many of his little investigations he was assisted by a certain Dr. Watson. I am that Dr. Watson." He spoke exactly like his books and looked on the whole like most of the illustrations, only of course by that time he was a good bit older. I told him, of course, how delighted I was to see him and how honored a young man should feel at a visit from such a well-known, etc., etc. The old boy lapped it up cheerfully and was quite human for a few minutes, and then he became extremely serious and that extraordinary woodenness settled down over his bluff countenance like a cloud over a mountain. "I have come to ask you, Mr. Carrington," said he, "if you would be good enough to give me the benefit of your opinion in a little matter on which I have recently been consulted."

"I'll be charmed," I said, "though I'm afraid you won't find my opinion of much weight compared with the kind of opinion you've been accustomed to." "We cannot all have the ability of my dis-

This was evidently an accident, but it seemed to remind him of some duty. for he glanced suddenly at his watch. However, it couldn't have been quite time to take another globule, for he put the bag back and produced a notebook instead.

"I have been most careful to note everything of importance," said he. "My distinguished friend always began with measurements and so have I. His lordship's dining room is 32 feet long and 19 feet wide. There is a discoloration of the wall paper within 13-16 inches from the bell. "I can't make notes of everything." he replied with a touch of rebuke. "I do not profess to re semble my distinguished friend exactly and in every point; but I have made very full notes of all the measurements in his late grace's house, and of every footprint that I could find, and of the hour at, which the clock stopped-

"Hullo!" I exclaimed. "This is new. You say the clock stopped?"

"Certainly," said Dr. Watson. "I stopped it. My distinguished friend always noted that fact, and the only way of observing it on this occasion was by stopping the clock myself." He suddenly gave a little start and pulled out his watch once more. "Just time," he said. "Talking of the clock reminded me," and thereupon he took out the paper bag and put another immense pink globule into his mouth. It was the last and he threw the paper bag into my waste paper basket.

By this time I was getting extremely curious to know what disease the doctor could be suffering from that required such terrific dosing. He seemed to me to be as fit as a fiddle.

"I hope it isn't asking a very rude question, doctor," I ventured to say, "but I really should like to know what those pink pills are."

"They aren't pills," said he, "they are a new form of digestive bon-bon." "Where did you come by them?" I asked.

"Well," said he, "it is a rather singular story In fact, it would have interested my disting guished friend very much indeed. This afternoon, just after lunch and shortly before I set out to see you, a lady called upon me and said that she had so enjoyed reading about my distinguished friend that she wanted to make some return to his biographer. So she had brought me s special form of bon-bon, invented and manufage tured by herself. She called them digestive bonbons, because she said they were particulariz suited to people with very strong digestions. She was so affable and said such nice things both about me and my distinguished friend that f couldn't possibly refuse her request."

"Her request?" I repeated.

"Yes, she begged me to take one of these every quarter of an hour till the bag was finished, so that she could feel sure her tribute to my talents had really touched the spot. I wasn't sure what spot she meant, but I promised her I would do as she desired."

A sudden idea had hit me in the eye as he was speaking.

"Had this lady by any chance red hair?" I asked.

"Marvelous!" he exclaimed. "This is really like my distinguished friend at his very best! Yes, she had red hair. However did you deduce that?"

"And did she seem a particularly truthful lady-the sort of blank lady who wouldn't lose her blank soul by telling a blank lie?"

His glassy eyes were positively glaring at me. "You are a perfect magician! This beats anything my distinguished friend ever deduced! Yes, she told me herself in recommending the bonbons only for extra strong digestions that she never deviated from the truth. She didn't call it the blank truth, but otherwise your deduction is perfectly corect! How did you-

But I interrupted him this time.

"Take that bon-ben out of your mouth and let me have a look at it!" I commanded.

He looked extremely surprised but fortunately his distinguished friend had acclimatized him to strange commands. The globule had been sucked white by this time but otherwise it was still intact. I cracked it with my office ruler-and took out the last fragment of the missing will.

"You can fust see the signature 'Munster'," I pointed out to him.

You should have seen the doctor sprint for the nearest chemist's. Everything possible was done, I believe, but the truthful lady had sized up his digestion only too correctly. It had done its

"Is that story literally true?" asked a skeptical member of our party.

The Parisian woman so much admired by her countrymen seldom has such bright eyes as women from other parts of France. Balzac noticed this and in describing Mme. de Listomere, who he says was "neither plain nor pretty. says that 'her eyes, far from being dulled as most eyes are in Paris, have a soft gleam which becomes magical when by chance she is Writers use all sorts of adjectives to describe the different sorts of bright eyes, but they all seem to agree that they are charming. The Italians and Spaniards are supposed to have especially bright eyes and it has even been suggested that the reason for this is that they consume so much olive oil. Sometimes the Italian eye is bright to the point of being dazzling. Gustave Flaubert speaks of an Italian woman, "whose black eyes shot forth lava-like flashes, like a Dickens always makes his attractive women bright-eyed. To him there was a fascination in eyes that served as mirrors where you could see your own image reflected. In "Christmas Chimes" he speaks of a pair of such eyes. "Bright eyes they were," he says. Eyes that would bear a world of looking in, before their depth was fathomed. Dark eyes, that reflected back the eyes that searched them." And the eyes of Ruth in "Martin Chuzzlewit," he says: "By the by how bright they were: Looking into them for but a moment, when you took her hand, you saw in each such a capital miniature of yourself."

Among famous folk who have been noted for their bright eyes was James Madison, who was not thought to possess much magnetism save that which he exerted through the twinkle of his eye. Hannah More, writer, reformer and educator of nineteenth century England, was famed for her eyes that her sister says were like dia-monds. One who saw this remarkable woman when she was 80 years old says that they were still "the dearest, brightest and most searching eyes" that he had ever seen.

The new winner of the Nobel prize was for some years a tramp in

A gentleman called at my kitchen door
To apply for a modest loan,
The sketchiest kind of a coat he wore
And his voice was a mumbling moan,
And he said, as my scowl grew stern and black,
While I looked at his bleary eyes,
"I ain't de bum wot I looks like, Jack,
I am out fer de Nobel prize."

Another man with a mildewed face, And arrayed in a fashion strange,

Accested me in a public place
And desired a piece of change.
He explained, when he read in my mocking eyes,
That I didn't approve his looks:
"I am studyin' up fer de Nobel prize
An' I needs de cush fer books."

A portly man with a halting gait,
And in somebody else's coat,
Stopped at my house one day to state
That he wanted a five-case note,
And he said, "I kin see you has got me wrong,

So I'm goin' to put you wise, You'll be glad that you helped dis guy along . When he cops de Nobel prize, And the self-same day a battered wreck
Whom I met by the merest chance,
Threw his greasy arms around my neck
And asked for a small advance.
And he cried, in a thin falsetto whine,
